61st Annual Meeting of the Association for Tropical Biology and Conservation

Tropical Biology and Conservation for a Sustainable World: Merging Diverse
Approaches, Actors and Local Knowledge

June 29th – July 4th, 2025
Oaxaca, Mexico

ASSOCIATION FOR
TROPICAL BIOLOGY
AND CONSERVATION

Each year, the Association for Tropical Biology and Conservation (ATBC) annual meetings bring together a diverse global community committed to the conservation of tropical ecosystems. It is an opportunity to explore the latest scientific advances, share field experiences, and discuss the most urgent conservation challenges from a socio-ecological perspective.

The 61st Annual Meeting of ATBC will take place from June 29th to July 4th, 2025 in the vibrant city of Oaxaca, Mexico. This event will bring together over 800 students, experts, researchers, policymakers, and conservation professionals from more than 50 countries.

With the theme "Tropical Biology and Conservation for a Sustainable World: Merging Diverse Approaches, Actors, and Local Knowledge," ATBC 2025 offers a unique platform to exchange ideas, foster collaboration, and build lasting partnerships. The congress will prioritize the inclusion of local and Indigenous knowledge, recognizing their critical role in biodiversity conservation and sustainable socio-ecological management. Their voices will be central to discussions and solutions, ensuring that diverse approaches drive a sustainable future for tropical ecosystems.

ATBC 2025 will be a space for exchange, collaboration, and action on the most pressing environmental challenges. Don't miss the opportunity to be part of a congress that will advance the conservation of tropical ecosystems and their invaluable biocultural diversity.

Sponsor Packages

Partnering with ATBC 2025 highlights your commitment to socio-ecological sustainability and inclusive science in the tropics. As a sponsor, you'll gain exclusive access to high-level networking, connect with a vibrant global community, and collaborate with influential conservation leaders. Your support will also create unique and invaluable opportunities for students and early-career professionals, breaking barriers to education and empowering the next generation of conservation leaders.
